

Michele Harvey

I purchased a Kissme dog from one of their buyers several years ago. I believe there was a medical issue and someone was handling things for the breeder in the interim. In any case, Kissme did not 'qualify' this buyer as a home/breeder and simply sold the dog with full registration. The buyer allowed her 60 lb male to breed this 32 female at something like 11 months, and then she just wanted to offload the pregnant dog. I was afraid she would go into the hands of a byb. I contacted Kissme before I went to meet the dog and got approval. I purchased her, whelped the litter, and found homes for all of the dogs at a financial loss to me - because the parents were not health tested. I did DNA testing on the mom, which was the maximum I could do on a pregnant dog. Afterwards, I spayed the momma dog and found her a forever home where she is loved and pampered and I still hear from her family today. Kissme refused to approve the litter registration and cut off communication. I provided extensive screen shots and documents from the buyer, and AKC did eventually register them.

Like Reply 12h

Missy Scott 🐾

How ironic this is, that you want to bring this up & make me look like the bad guy. I couldn't sign off on a litter that I didn't witness. I explained that to you. Okay, for everyone else, here's the tea. I sold Margot to a show home. She didn't turn out & was returned to me. At the time of her return, I was 3000 miles away receiving treatment for Scleroderma. I contacted my groomer who agreed to place her in a pet home. I thought that was done until Ms. Harvey contacted me telling me she was on her way to get Margot. At the time I was very upset & Margot was to be returned to me, as per my contract. I told Ms. Harvey that too.. Then I'm informed she's pregnant at 11 months old!!! With what was said to be an accidental breeding. Then later when she wanted me to sign off, I'm informed it's a witnessed breeding. I never stopped contact with her. We had several ensuing conversations. She couldn't take no for an answer. I wasn't willing to put my name on a litter that should have never been bred. Then she said she needed papers for these pups for buyers & I've learned she kept pups back from this breeding for herself. She wanted the akc papers it appears for all the wrong reasons. I'm still not happy about it. I told her this dog would not better the breed & should be spayed.

Like Reply 10h

Reply to Michele Harvey...

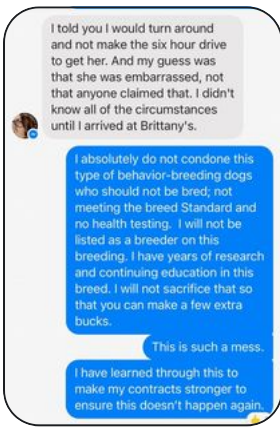

Missy Scott 🐾

This is Missy. This dog has NOT been rejected many times. I got her back from the original owner, as expected, for this original owner was compliant and followed the contract. Margot did not meet my standards as a breeding bitch and should not have been bred. One of the people I partner with in poodles kept her while I was undergoing treatment and helped me find a home for Margot. She assured me that a questionnaire was performed and she felt she had found the perfect lifelong home. I thought Margot was sold on a spay/neuter contract. She should have never been bred. Margot does not meet the breed Standard. I did voice my opinion that Margot should have come back to me. You did not ask me in advance, you told me you were on your way to get her. Then you asked me if I had an issue with this. I told you that the dog should have come back to me. At that point, did it really matter what I

Like Reply 10h

Missy Scott 🐾

Like Reply 10h

1

Stephanie Smith

Missy Scott did you see she said she went around the limited AKC... and got the AKC papers regardless

Like Reply 10h Edited

Missy Scott

Stephanie Smith Yes, I saw that. Margot was in MY NAME. She was never taken out of my name. Until somehow Michele was able to put her in her name without my signature.

Like Reply 10h

Stephanie Smith

Missy Scott that's a actually Pretty easy to do... I've witnessed many people do it

This is why I don't send out papers to homes till I get proof of spay/neuter

Like Reply 10h

1

Missy Scott

Stephanie Smith I've had another issue this year. Every dog will now be co-owned or sent without papers until spay or neuter. I tend to trust people way to much.

Like Reply 9h

2

Stephanie Smith

Missy Scott yes unfortunately I've learned the hard way as well

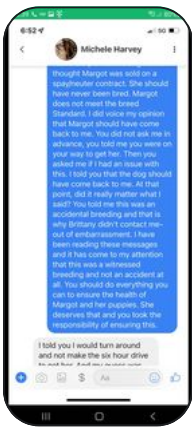

You absolutely cannot trust anyone

Like Reply 9h

1

Missy Scott

Like Reply 9h

Jessica Hockemeier

Missy Scott good on you for saving these screen shots! Good thing you did too apparently.

Like Reply 9h

Missy Scott

Jessica Hockemeier Thank God. People are awful. 🤔

Like Reply 9h

Jessica Hockemeier

Missy Scott so very unfortunately true. I will never understand it

Like Reply 9h

Michele Harvey

Like Reply 9h

Stephanie Smith

Michele Harvey so are these messages between you and the person who had the dog ?

If doesn't say

Like Reply 9h

Missy Scott

Michele, Klea worked for my groomer. She should have never had any dealing with this. Well, this speaks volumes.

Like Reply 8h

Michele Harvey

I was informed this is a conversation between Brittany, the purchaser who bred the dog, and a Kissme representative. I can also provide front and back copies of the FULL (not limited) AKC registration, signed by Missy Smith.

1

Like Reply 8h

Missy Scott

Michele Harvey the original registration was a full registration to a show home. When that didn't work out, I was in Seattle. Margo went to my groomer. I didn't even know Klea was involved in this at all and I sure didn't get the money. Can't trust anyone...

Like Reply 8h Edited

Michele Harvey

Missy Scott and Brittany got $3000 from me to cover the price of the dog and her airfare. But the pups all got placed into homes and loved for life. One is even a service dog. I did not keep a puppy for myself and she was spayed afterwards. She lives with a couple who are in their 70s and she is completely adored and the light of their lives.

Like Reply 8h

Missy Scott

Michele Harvey I'm so happy that she was placed in a good home. I hate that this ever happened.

Like Reply 8h

Reply to Michele Harvey...

Michele Harvey

AKC only requested the chain of title of the dam to be verified by Missy. Brittany signed as the witness to the breeding.

Like Reply 8h

Missy Scott 🐾

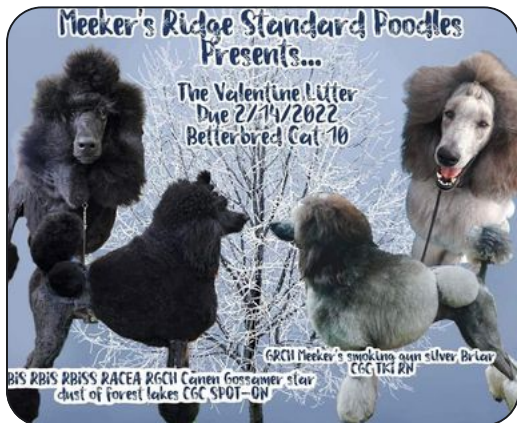

Michele Harvey you kept a puppy from a terrible breeding. How are your puppy's hips? I don't even know what you're trying to do here. You were so mad at me for not signing off and you went around me and got it done. I'm guessing you're still pissy that I wasn't supportive of this awful thing. You lied to me, told me it was an accidental breeding and then told me it was witnessed. I'm really sorry that I hurt your feelings. I should have sued Brittany and got my dog back. I suppose I still can.

Like Reply 8h Edited

Reply to Michele Harvey...

Missy Scott 🐾

Michele Harvey, what is the pedigree here?

Like Reply 8h

😱 5

Missy Scott 🐾

Your keeper puppy (that you didn't keep?) Is co-owned by you and has been bred to your male twice. Stop playing.

Like Reply 8h

😱 3

Michele Harvey

Missy Scott I do not have any ownership in this silver dog. I did not keep any puppies from that litter. The only silver litter I have ever whelped is the one out of Kissme Beauty and Steel which was bred by Brittany. On the litter and each pup's registration, Brittany is listed as the breeder. Kissme Beauty and Steel is still in my name because her family was not interested in registration papers.

Like Reply 8h

Missy Scott 🐾

Michele Harvey so you took the awful litter and sold some on full registration? And now you are breeding them to your stud? Yeah, I'm the bad guy. I took a chance on two fully health tested parents- bred to produce silvers that I could breed up- but they weren't even nice enough to breed up. Margo was to be sold on limited registration. You KNOW she was to come back to me to prevent this very thing from happening. Now, what you have done is continued a shit line that are decreasing the quality of the breed.

Like Reply 8h Edited

Missy Scott 🐾

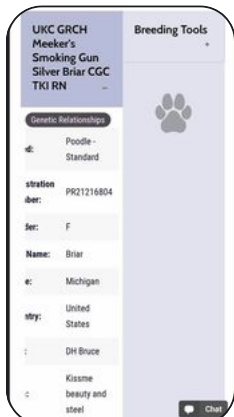

Michele Harvey bred by Brittany is your shield? You're trying to hide behind that but YOU are the one who whelped the litter and decided who did and didn't get full registration. You told me that you were selling to two ladies who wanted "papers" but they such good homes. You're full of shit. I can admit that I bred a litter that didn't turn out. You took advantage of a situation and you continue to do so.

Like Reply 8h

Missy Scott 🐾

If you need some help finding that lineage- here. I will help you. You kept a puppy and have now bred it twice to your male.

Like Reply 8h

Danelle Floyd Senkbeil

What a mess. So my understanding

Missy is Kissme. So dog Margo was to come back to missy but previous owner ignored that agreement. Bred her was an opps, sold her while pregnant, now not an opps. Missy said to new person dog was to come back to her as was never to be bred. Litter whelped by new owner and sold some with full rights and now that line is being bred but the blame is on Missy who agreed dog didnt mature to quality, missy wanted the dog never bred, never resold, and no puppies sold to breeding homes but yet Missy is the bad guy.

I am really confused as how that's the outcome. Seems this keeps happening and is exactly why new people struggle to get show prospects because people ignore contracts.

Like Reply 8h Edited

 Kim Taylor Baldwin

Danelle Floyd Senkbeil Amen!

Like Reply 8h

 Danelle Floyd Senkbeil

Kim Taylor Baldwin right why even get papers. Accidents have been known to happen. Good pets in correct homes are wanted so why even register a litter that was an opps and mom spayed. Write a contract and place all the puppies on neuter/spay agreement and avoid more issue.

Like Reply 7h

 Kim Taylor Baldwin

Danelle Floyd Senkbeil Exactly right. This is just crazy.

Like Reply 7h

 Michele Harvey

Danelle Floyd Senkbeil I thought this was uncensored opinions? I was brand new back then and this was my experience. Others can learn from it. I offered to step out of the whole situation before making the complete 6-hr drive (each way), but she never asked nor stated that she wanted me to.

Like Reply 7h Edited

Michele Harvey

I am glad I was able to help the dog and her puppies when she needed someone, and I will continue to support them for their lifetimes. I feel sad that she was put in that position; she is such a sweet girl, and did not want to be a momma so young. The money I lost on the experience was money well spent because she and the pups were well cared for from the moment I left Brittany's with her, and the families that took them in love their dogs wholeheartedly. I also learned a lot by dealing with a momma who did not want to mother a litter of puppies for the first time.

Like Reply 7h

Danelle Floyd Senkbeil

Michele Harvey it totally is but in this situation and wording it seemed the blame was on Missy when in reality the blame starts with the person you got the dog from. I have no horse in this race but I stated my personal experiences above also totally uncensored. I just typed out what I understood between what you and Missy had typed so easier to piece together but the blame here does not seem to lie with Missy but instead with Britney and who sold you the dog from these comments.

Like Reply 7h

Stephanie Smith

Michele Harvey you should have never had any sold as breeders let alone breed them with your male.... If you thought all this was bad... clearly you had other plans and wanted "to make your money back"

All the puppies should have went without papers on spay and neuter contracts and you should have never agreed to breed to any of them

And missy isn't to be blamed in any of this Clearly Brittany is the one who went around the contracts and the dog was supposed to be sold on a contract to you... none of these puppies should have gone to breeding homes

Like Reply 7h Edited

Michele Harvey

That is an opinion. I was never informed, nor requested, not to sell puppies on full registration. As stated, I was inexperienced and learning my way through the whole situation. I 'donated' thousands of dollars to this little lady and her litter - and gladly to ensure their wellbeing. I will never "make my money back" as you say - that is completely unfounded. I have always worked to pay for my dogs, not the other way around and especially not this precious little girl who was a victim of humans. Poor girl had chunks missing from her shoulders that looked like the male bit and held on to her. And the little momma was spayed and placed - not used again to breed, because it was the right thing to do for her. I didn't choose "to make my money back" by breeding her again. I'm sure I could have worked my way through a few more litters with her if "making my money back" was the goal. Or perhaps I could have kept the female puppies, "to make my money back". I could have creatively marketed the puppies for the going standard poodle rate to "make my money back". There were a lot more ways to "make my money back" faster than studding my boy years later if that was the goal. Also, I was told she was cut because she had a gay tail - that it was attempted to be bred it out of the mother. Some breeders do not feel gay tail is an issue, especially overseas. I believe breeders have the personal choice regarding gay tails.

Like Reply 6h

Reply to Missy Scott...

Mary Laser

F